The training commenced with a comprehensive introduction session. Clear training objectives were outlined, providing a roadmap for participants.

The best thing was that all the participants engaged in group activities, addressing challenges collaboratively. Group dynamics added a practical dimension to problem-solving. In-depth knowledge was imparted on long-term, medium-term, and lesson planning. Practical insights into effective planning strategies were shared. Practical applications were emphasized, offering a hands-on experience. Participants gained insights into employing success criteria in teaching.

The four-day virtual training not only met but exceeded expectations. Sally Burbeary's expertise and the interactive nature of the sessions provided a profound learning experience. We all left with enriched knowledge, and effective teaching approaches with respect to global perspectives. The use of Zoom and the Miro board enhanced the virtual learning environment, making it a successful and engaging training program.
